She remembered that another man might have been there, watching her. Then she looked again, and.. If I am screwed, Ruth is also screwed. On the other hand, would I be justified in making an example of her, just as well as of Lisa? Possibly. (How long is a piece of string?).. This then brought to mind a difficult question. How to be justifiably honourable in this case, whether she should testify or not? Did it matter what Lisa did?.. Ruth was one of the few people in the world that I loved... well, there was also the huge problem of the knife. I had it in my hand, it was the only thing I had that I could use to defend myself. If I didn't get rid of it I would be defenceless. I didn't know how I would do it, but the knife must go. If I did not do it, I would certainly have to fight, and I did not want to fight. I would prefer to die. To fight, and win, and get to tell another person that she had sent me to Hell, I preferred to stay alive, to take a bullet... but if that wasn't the case, what was? If, in fact, I did have to fight in some way, I hoped that it would be less painful than it would be to die. I felt that all I had to do was to hold the knife in my right hand (the weapon I was expected to use in defence of myself) in a certain position and wait. I could just easily die of shock and be gone before anyone knew what had happened. If I had to fight, it was a very real possibility that I would surely win. My only problem was to be sure that I could win..... If I had been sure I would not have given the knife to Lisa; I would have hidden it somewhere, until the opportunity to kill myself arrived. But since I had not been sure, I had gone ahead and given it to her. The knife was now in Lisa's pocket, and my gun was in Ruth's. I caught Lisa's look and shook my head. I did not need to know what she was thinking... I looked at the door, and knew I had two choices; I could either go and get rid of the knife, or try to talk my way

In the end, the Angels took care of the Tigers. Jon Lester was making his 10th start of the season (2nd career), after going 3-4 with a 1.99 ERA last year as a rookie. He said that he was feeling good and his results bore that out. Jake Peavy was impressive in his first postseason start for the White Sox, as they rallied for a 3-2 victory in Game 3. Storyline In a region ravaged by communism and civil war, the arrival of a stranger sets in motion a chain of events that impacts the lives of those around him. Written by The first film of Polish director Andrzej Wajda, "Man of Marble" unfolds in the wake of the violent 1956 uprising in Poland that eventually led to the country's political and cultural transition to an authoritarian regime. The film follows a group of rebels who attempt to prevent a group of political prisoners from murdering the local mayor by blowing up a bridge. As each of the protagonists confront the ramifications of their actions, the film plays out a drama of passion, revenge and double meaning. Footage courtesy of the Criterion Collection. Soundtrack: "Power and Glory" (Groups U.S.A., John Williams) Soundtrack Review: When Polish-born filmmaker Andrzej Wajda began his career in 1956 with "Man of Marble," his opening sequence was unique: a montage of newsreel footage, some eerie piano-driven ballad, and a timeworn piano performance of Chopin's "Scherzo (from the Second Piano Concerto)" designed to underscore the director's philosophy of self-reflection. The point was clear: this was no ordinary film. Wajda's personal point of view would be revealed in a way only he could, and critics responded favorably to his long-awaited feature debut. Critic John Patterson wrote in his eulogy to the director, "From the first
